Leather Binding Machine

While leather binding is not a necessary process in production, it can greatly enhance the appearance and design of notebook covers by allowing for the combination of different leather colors, patterns, and types. However, traditional leather binding methods have limitations due to their slow production speed and the need for precise handiwork and string stitching on both sides. At Lekit, we have developed an innovative technique for binding leather without the use of glues or stitches, which not only speeds up the production process, but also enables us to create even more unique and intricate designs on the covers of our notebooks.
