Promising Enterprise

Certificate of venture businesses

Since we started our business as SJ TECH in July of 2017, we've been trying to produce high-quality auto parts of all kinds that can stay on top with their sharp competitiveness in the industry.

SJ TECH would use the carefully selected products of a top-class line, each of which is created by craftsmanship, to meet our customers' needs.

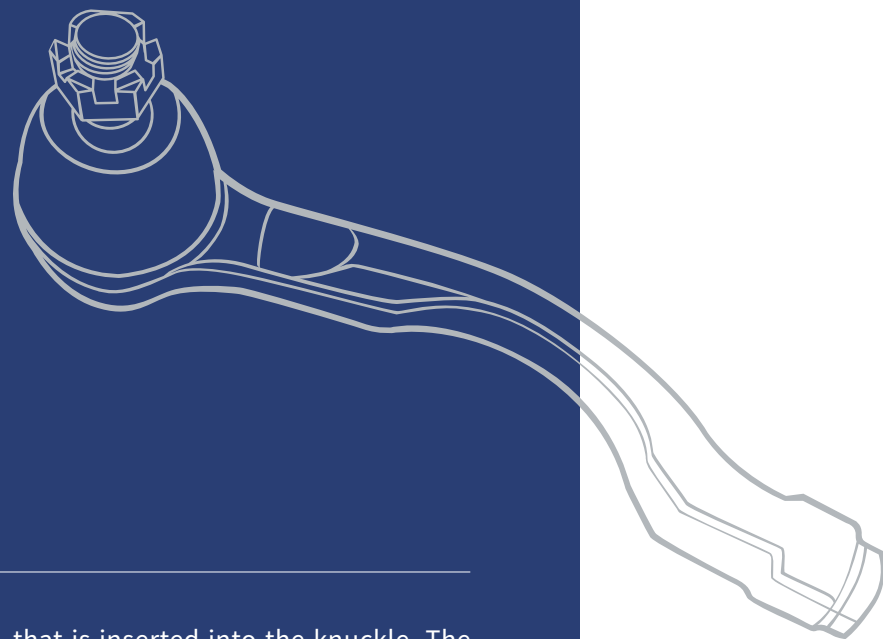

SJ TECH promises to keep trying or studying harder to develop into the leader in the market for auto parts, good and green enough to live together with people and environment around us.

STEERING PARTS

Tie Rod End

Tie rod ends are the crucial meeting point between a vehicle's steering rack and steering knuckle. The rod end not only transmits the force from the steering rack to the wheels, but it also provides a pivot point for the steering to maintain its geometry. The rod end typically features a round end and has a threaded bolt perpendicular to it that is inserted into the knuckle. The rounded end also houses bearings that allow the bolt to pivot freely; this end is covered by a protective boot to keep dirt out. This design may look uncomplicated to the naked eye, but because it's so crucial to handling, the tolerances involved are very tight.

Rack End

Equipped in rack & pinion steering system as steering gear mechanism. Steering moment from steering wheel is transferred to running wheels through rack end. It absorbs road conditions and vibrations in order to stabilize vehicle handling. Ball joint is set at vehicle side in order to cope with updowns of running wheel and turning motion from steering wheel. Connected to outer tie rod end transferring steering moment it has wider pivot angle to cope with updowns and back-forward motions. By turns of rack end ball stud it can adjust toe-in alignment.

SUSPENSION PARTS

Control Arm

In automotive suspension, a control arm, also known as an A-arm, is a hinged suspension link between the chassis and the suspension upright or hub that carries the wheel.

The inboard (chassis) end of a control arm is attached by a single pivot, usually a rubber bushing. It can thus control the position of the outboard end in only a single degree of freedom, maintaining the radial distance from the inboard mount. Although not deliberately free to move, the single bushing does not control the arm from moving back and forth; this motion is constrained by a separate link or radius rod.

This is in contrast to the wishbone. Wishbones are triangular and have two widely spaced inboard bearings. These constrain the outboard end of the wishbone from moving back and forth, controlling two degrees of freedom, and without requiring additional links.

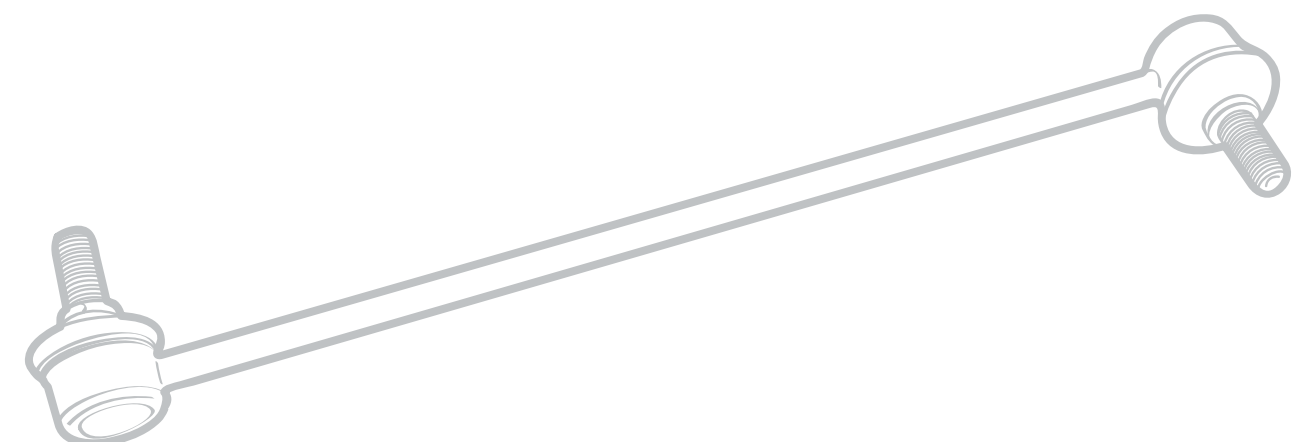

Most control arms form the lower link of a suspension. A few designs use them as the upper link, usually with a lower wishbone. The additional radius rod is then attached to the upper arm.

Stabilizer Link

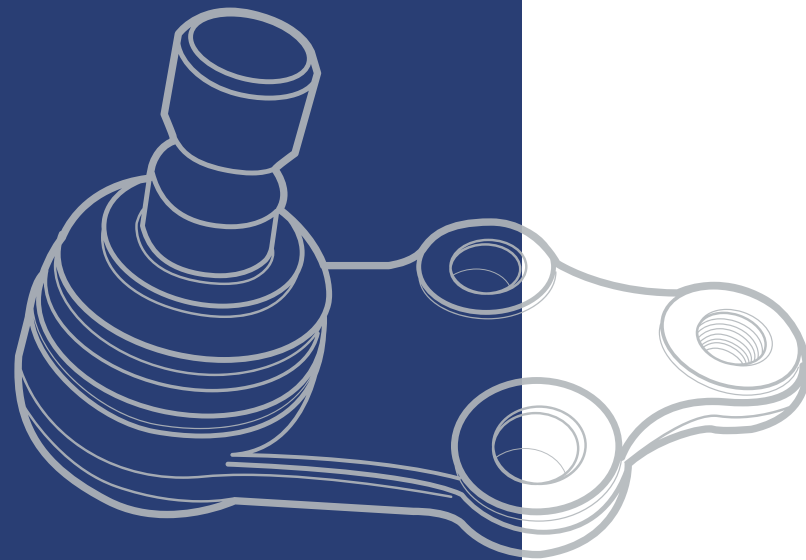

Stabilizer links act as components of auto suspensions, connecting several other parts that take much of the punishment as you pass over pot holes and other road imperfections.

Modern cars use segmented suspensions. Stabilizer or sway bars have stabilizer links. The stabilizer bar holds pairs of wheels connected, while stabilizer links hook this larger piece with arms that go up to the wheels themselves. Ball joint connections enable turning and suspension travel.

SUSPENSION PARTS

Ball Joint

In an automobile, ball joints are spherical bearings that connect the control arms to the steering knuckles. They are used on virtually every automobile made and work similarly to the ball-and-socket design of the human hip joint.

A ball joint consists of a bearing stud and socket enclosed in a casing; all these parts are made of steel. The bearing stud is tapered and threaded, and fits into a tapered hole in the steering knuckle. A protective encasing prevents dirt from getting into the joint assembly. Usually, this is a rubber-like boot that allows movement and expansion of lubricant. Motion-control ball joints tend to be retained with an internal spring, which helps to prevent vibration problems in the linkage.

The “offset” ball joint provides means of movement in systems where thermal expansion and contraction, shock, seismic motion, and torsional motions, and forces are present.

Bushing

The bushing pressed into the control arm prevents vibration and noise at the connection between the control arm and the vehicle frame.

The thick rubber bushing balances elasticity and rigidity for a comfortable ride and excellent durability.
