Bringing refugee craftsmanship to the world

Over 120 million* people have been forcibly displaced across the world, driven from their homes by war, persecution or disaster. Amongst this vast group of people, there are incredible artisans that possess the talent, culture and heritage to create objects of true beauty. Products that can fill our homes with life and joy.

MADE51 is a global brand, an initiative brought to life by UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, who connects these artisans with social enterprises. By utilizing Fair Trade principles, they support the design, development and marketing of the unique products that make up the MADE51 collection.

Through MADE51, those who have been forced to flee have an opportunity to earn an income while in the midst of displacement. For consumers, these pieces are more than beautiful examples of craftsmanship and heritage, they are expressions of hope.

Congolese & Burundian basketry

Basketry is one of the longest-standing art forms in East Africa and still plays an important role in day-to-day life. Not only are baskets practical, but they hold deep symbolic meaning as they're associated with hospitality and given as gifts on important occasions such as weddings.

Baskets are painstakingly crafted from natural or upcycled fibers, like grain sacks, by women who often learned the skills from their mothers or grandmothers. Refugee artisans in MADE51 specialize in coiling, plaiting, and braiding – three distinct styles of basketry. These groups source raw materials locally and use natural dying techniques.

Most MADE51 artisans that are refugees from DR Congo and Burundi are living in Rwanda and Zambia, or returnees in Burundi working cross-border in Tanzania.

Malian metal & leatherwork

Traditionally, the nomadic-pastoralist Tuareg people inhabit vast areas of the Sahara Desert, including in Mali, where conflict has driven hundreds of thousands from their homelands. Much of Tuareg craftsmanship reflects their ability to thrive in the desert by making both aesthetic and utilitarian items. In the Tuareg culture, artisans belong to a hereditary caste which includes blacksmiths, leatherworkers, and jewellers. They are artisans at birth, with their own dialect and myths related to their skills and tools. Each of their handmade pieces carry the know-how of countless generations.

Tuareg women specialize in weaving using natural materials or in leatherwork, tanning hides by hand. Men often practice metalworking, using very basic anvils and hammers to shape recycled bronze, aluminium, and copper into intricate tools and adornments, including beautiful jewellery.

MADE51 works with Malian refugees of Tuareg heritage who are hosted in Burkina Faso, Mauritania and Niger.

Weaving from Myanmar

The Karen people are one of many ethnic groups who call Myanmar home. For generations, they have made home textiles, clothing, and accessories from woven fabrics. Weaving is typically done on backstrap loom, one of the oldest forms of weaving.

A backstrap loom is made using simple materials – sticks and threads – that are anchored to a fixed object on one side and the weaver's body on the other. With this basic tool, talented artisans can make wide varieties of textiles with incredibly intricate patterns.

MADE51 Karenni refugee women in Thailand are not only weaving on the traditional looms, they are also spinning and dyeing their own threads using traditional techniques.

MADE51 works with Karen and Karenni refugee women from Myanmar who live in camps in northern Thailand.

South Sudanese beadwork

Beadwork has a long history in Eastern Africa and can still carry great cultural significance. Colours and patterns can indicate age, ethnic group or marital status. Often, women learn beading from their mothers and grandmothers, and it becomes an asset that they can carry forward with them to rely on, celebrate, and pass on to their children.

MADE51 artisans specialise four predominant beading techniques: crochet, loom weaving, coiling with wire and knitting. With these different techniques, artisans can make an incredible range of aesthetic and functional items, including bowls, wall hangings and personal adornments.

We currently work with talented beadworkers in South Sudan, Kenya and Egypt, most of whom are displaced Sudanese, South Sudanese and Ethiopian women.

Syrian embroidery & crochet

Dresses, scarves, and head coverings. Cushions, curtains, and tablecloths. Embroidery and crochet have historically played a vital role in Syrian society and are crafts that were traditionally practiced in every home. In the case of embroidery, heritage and providence are expressed through particular constellations of colours, motifs, and techniques.

MADE51 artisans specialize in cross-stitch patterns and motifs, as well as freestyle techniques that can bring to life dynamic images. Alongside this, many are skilled in crochet. Artisan groups often use environmentally friendly materials including organic cotton and up-cycled billboard, boat cover, tires and inner tubing - contributing to environmental preservation through their work.

We currently work with Syrian refugee artisans in Lebanon,
Turkey, Armenia,
Jordan, and Egypt

Afghan embroidery & crochet

Afghanistan has a rich history of craftsmanship, particularly intricate embroidery and crochet. Different styles of needlework are tied to geographic locations and ethnic groups.

Afghan refugee artisans in MADE51 specialize in Tarshumar, Kandahari, PuktaDozi, and ZanjeeraDozi embroidery. Some of these stitches are used to cover large areas of cloth quickly with bold, floral designs, while others are used to create intricate, geometric patterns. Many artisans also specialise in intricate, Zari thread crochet.

We currently work with Afghan refugee artisans in Pakistan, India, Malaysia, and women within Afghanistan who are internally displaced or former refugees.
