Embellished with Sunlight

We know very well what clothes to wear when it is so hot that we sweat from head to toe with almost every step we take. In scorching heat, we intuitively look for light airy clothes that breathe, bring us relief whenever we touch them, and do not irritate the skin. The same should apply when selecting fabrics to surround us during the hot summer months on our terraces, balconies and everywhere we spend time outdoors, enjoying what nature has to offer.

Refreshing textiles for hot summer days.

Another property you should expect from summer fabrics, similarly to summer clothes, is the resistance to burning sunlight. We value those fabrics that provide cool shade and bring us respite on a hot day.

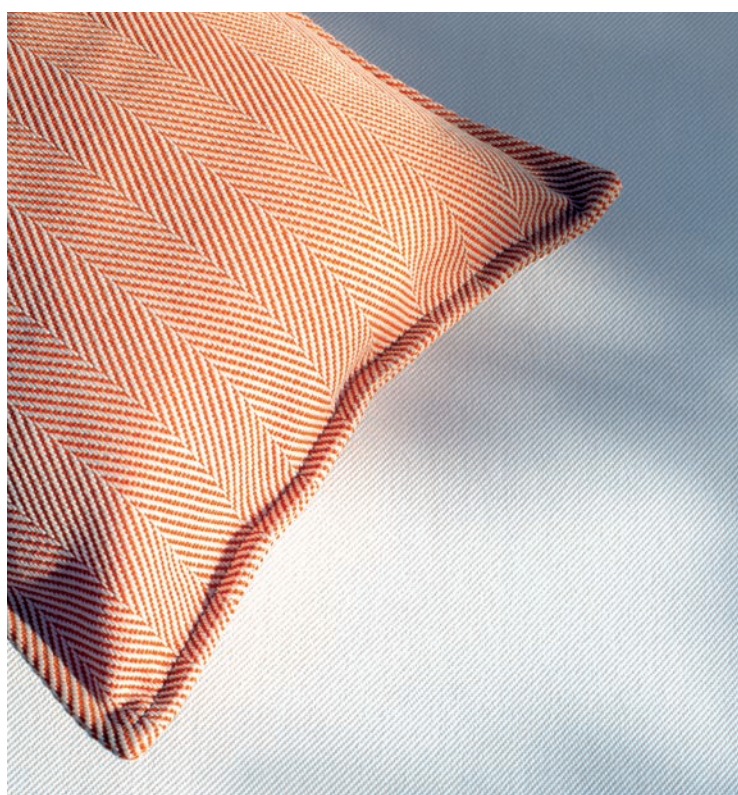

Our irritated senses long for peace brought by the calm aesthetics of natural fabrics which breathe, filter light and touch us in the gentlest possible way.

One of the greatest advantages of outdoor fabrics is their dry, matt surface. It is pleasant to the touch and absorbs light, which prevents blinding reflexes. Thus, the light becomes softer and interplays beautifully with shadows.

We look for the quality and weaves that closely resemble those used inside our homes.

We can choose from various patterns and jacquard effects, using the existing collections to create our own tasteful, aesthetic, personalised compositions.

The most popular are plain backgrounds and geometry, which can be combined into a fabric patchwork with other materials such as wood, cement, powder coated metal, ceramic pots or rattan surfaces.

Colour matters.

When exposed to sunlight, the colour of the fabric is of utmost importance.

The colours you choose will affect the mood of your outdoor surroundings. Furniture and decorations may blend flawlessly with natural landscapes or do exactly the opposite – stand out and provide strong, dynamic contrasts, which are further reinforced by the interplay of light and shadows in strong sunlight.

Contrary to popular belief, sunny beaches and gardens are a great place to use black, especially in an elegant, traditional contrast with white. Geometric patterns, stripes, chevrons or melange weaves work great if you want to create a modern, slightly exotic raw effect in your summer surroundings.

Sandy shades of beige, airy whites and stone greys resonate with reflections of sunrays to sooth your senses. A monochromatic palette of natural shades of beige and cream will help you unwind and facilitate “slow” relaxation and rest. In this context, lime yellow and green will have a fruity energetic, yet more delicate effect.

Contrasting complementary hues bring to mind the colourful cultures encountered in exotic travels, which will regain authenticity in the warm sunrays. Vivid and energetic shades of yellow, orange and red will provide a strong contrast against the green colours of nature and certainly invigorate you with summer energy.

Recent years have made us increasingly more appreciative of outdoor recreation. Thus, we arrange the surroundings of our homes, hotels and guest houses with exceptional care. Sanremo is a collection of fabrics straight from the most exclusive resorts and seaside holiday estates.

These outdoor fabrics with a thick jacquard weave bear the names of the most famous Italian resorts, places where you can have a stylish holiday. The fabrics from the Sanremo collection will be a perfect solution for an elegant open-air living room: on the terrace, in the garden, around the swimming pool, and even in a yacht. The names of the fabrics also refer to the fact that they are made in Italy.

Sanremo fabrics can be used to upholster furniture, make awnings, blinds, umbrellas, cushions and tablecloths. Thanks to their thick weave, resistance to moisture and sunlight, they are very durable and will make your outdoor furniture and accessories last for many seasons. They are easy to clean and maintain. They can be used in yachts and areas near swimming pools as they are resistant not only to rain and dew, but also to sea and chlorinated water. The fabrics from the Sanremo collection can also be purchased in a flame retardant version.

The Sanremo collection consists of four harmoniously composed patterns, inspired by clothing fabrics. Each pattern is available in 6 colour versions: from subdued white and beige, to vivid shades of red and neon green.
