ELK Leather

more details

is widely used in fine leather goods in Northern Europe.

Elk leather with its Nordic style base is not only stylish, but also very functional.

Despite its softness, elk leather has more than three times the strength of cowhide.

Since the ancient times, Elk, the largest type of deer in the world, has been regarded as sacred, and in particular, the Nordic people have believed that the Elk's horn and skin bring good luck. Elks live primarily in the wilderness of Northern Europe. To sustain the natural balance of the elk population, elk hunting is strictly regulated at national level, and only authorized personnel are allowed to hunt them, resulting in limited amount of elk leather available for manufacturing.

Elk leather is widely used in fine leather goods in Northern Europe. Elk leather with its Nordic style base is not only stylish, but also very functional. Despite its softness, elk leather has more than three times the strength of cowhide.

HANJI

Hanji, the Korean traditional handmade paper, is known for its elegance and durability. The harmony of off-white color and exposed dak tree fiber enhances the aesthetic value. Also hanji's thick and tough texture is adequate for every writing and drawing tool: pencil, ink pen, fountain pen, watercolors and so on, and it makes notes and paintings on hanji last for a thousand years. OROM reinterprets hanji with modern design to share its excellence all over the world.
